These (fays hej are the only ItJtotet formed in our minds, and by ohkh alone we are per/loaded tk fit to dohonour to him who rs the Image of the invisible God, the prototype and architypal Wtern of all such Images. Had Christians then given adoration to them, or but set them up in their places of Worship, with what face can we suppose Hey should have told the world, that they so much flighted and abhorred rtiem$ and indeed what a hearty detection they universally thew d to any;hing that had but the least shadow of Idolatry, has been before prov d at arge. The Council of Illiberif that was Cm, Gi ield in Spain some time before Constan- ft exprefly provided against it, de: reeing that no Tittnres ought to be in ths lurch, nor that any thing thtts worshiped and adored Jhould be painted ttpott -- mails: words so clear and positive, s not to be evaded by all the little wfts and glosses which the Expositors 12 o Part 1. os that Canon would put upon it. The first use of Statues and Pictures in publick Churches was rneerly historical, or to add some beauty and ornament to the place, which after Ages improved into Superstition and Idolatry. The first that we meet with upon good authority (for all the instances brought for the first Ages are either false and spurious, or impertinent and to no purposes is..
